Internship Spring 2027 – Peace and Dialogue in faith-based- and environmental peacebuilding

Are you looking for an internship with an international civil society organisation working on faith-based environmental peacebuilding and evidence-based advocacy through the contextualisation of dialogue? Are you interested in translating research, community rights, and monitoring into practice? Then you may be Danmission's next intern.

About Danmission

Danmission is a Danish faith-based development organisation working in seven programme countries across Asia, the Middle East, and East Africa. Within our Peace and Democracy portfolio and peace network, we partner with local civil society and faith-based partners to work for peace, democracy, and FoRB (Freedom of Religion and Belief) through faith and dialogue approaches.

About the internship

You will join Danmission's International Department and work closely with colleagues and partners within the Peace and Democracy portfolio. The internship offers insight into how an international, faith-based development organisation works with community-led peacebuilding and global dialogue frameworks.

Your work will centre on the follow-up and implementation of new exercises and written materials for our Dialogue Toolbox, which is used across partner countries: Cambodia, Myanmar, Lebanon, Syria, Tanzania, and Kenya. The Dialogue Toolbox refers to local, community-driven approaches to monitoring peacebuilding through trauma-sensitive dialogue, faith, and rights, supporting people in conflict and war with digital tools. Within this, we hope that you will help us expand our knowledge on environmental peacebuilding, as the nexus of these topics is incredibly important to research.

Your main tasks will include

- Conducting research and knowledge gathering on peacebuilding and dialogue-related topics.
- Monitoring new reports, publications, and emerging trends within the peace and dialogue field and identifying key developments relevant to our work.
- Contributing to the development of tools and methodologies related to dialogue and peacebuilding.
- Developing new exercises, case studies, and written materials for our Dialogue Toolbox.
- Supporting research and knowledge development on topics such as faith-based- and environmental peacebuilding, trauma-sensitive dialogue, and contextualising dialogue
- Supporting peace network activities, meetings, events and other ad hoc tasks related to peace and democracy programming.

About you

We imagine that you:

- Are enrolled in a relevant bachelor's or master's programme (e.g. peace- and conflict studies, international development, environmental studies, political science, anthropology, or similar related field)
- Have strong oral, written, and analytical skills in English
- Have a strong interest in peacebuilding, conflict transformation, and dialogue processes.
- Are open to engaging with faith-based and environmental perspectives on development and interfaith dialogue.

- Are creative, proactive, and eager to contribute ideas and new perspectives, with strong analytical and research skills
- Work independently, are well-structured, and enjoy turning analysis into practical knowledge in an international environment

Practical information

The internship is unpaid, runs for one semester, and is designed to meet ECTS requirements. You will be assigned a supervisor and have regular meetings focused on learning and well-being. The internship is based at Danmission's head office in Hellerup, with the possibility of up to two days per week of remote work. The working language for written outputs and partner communication is English. Supervision and internal meetings will be conducted in English or Danish, depending on the intern's background. The day-to-day language at the head office is primarily Danish, so a basic understanding of Danish is an asset for social integration but not a requirement. Danmission may move its office to another location in Copenhagen during the internship.
Start date: February 1st 2027.
